UNITED STATES AND REPUBLIC OF INDIA RELATIONS

(Mr. CARTER of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARTER of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the strong diplomatic partnership between the United States of America and the Republic of India. Our relationship shares important values that are rooted in democracy.

I had the privilege of meeting with the consulate general of India last week, and I learned even more about India's partnership with the United States, their economy, India's challenges with combatting COVID-19, and their state of international affairs. It was a wonderful opportunity to listen and learn more about our friends in India and ways in which we can help each other continue to thrive.

In February, President Trump spoke at the Motera Stadium in India, filled with 110,000 spectators, and was given a warm welcome to the country. At the successful event, President Trump discussed ways in which he has been working with Prime Minister Modi on an array of topics that will help both of our nations move forward. Some of these topics include security and defense cooperation, energy, trade, and promoting women entrepreneurs.

Additionally, India and the United States are both working on combating terrorism in all forms. I applaud the joint efforts of India and the U.S. in eradicating terrorism.

Madam Speaker, I thank Prime Minister Modi for being a friend of the United States.

PAYROLL TAX HOLIDAY

(Mr. JOHN W. ROSE of Tennessee asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. JOHN W. ROSE of Tennessee. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of a payroll tax holiday.

As we consider providing additional direct assistance to Americans, a payroll tax holiday would be a logical way to encourage folks to get back to work and help stimulate the economy.

Suspending the payroll tax would ease the impact of the government-imposed economic shutdown. By allowing small businesses to keep more of their hard-earned money, we enable them to reinvest in operations and avoid employee layoffs.

Direct assistance through a payroll tax holiday would reduce potential fraud, as individuals must be verified employees to receive the benefit. I believe this commonsense solution would boost the great American comeback that is already underway.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to consider a payroll tax holiday in any future relief bill.

RECOGNIZING STUDENTS OF THE YEAR ZACHARY CRYER AND ANTAVION MOORE

(Mr. JOHNSON of Louisiana asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. JOHNSON of Louisiana. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize two exceptional students from Louisiana's Fourth Congressional District, Zachary Cryer and Antavion Moore.

Zach, from Benton, was recently named Louisiana's Middle School Student of the Year. Zach has maintained a 4.0 GPA throughout his time at Benton Middle School, and he has already scored a 28 on the ACT as an eighth grader.

Tay, from Ringgold, was named the Louisiana High School Student of the Year, and he has already earned an associate's degree and a certificate of general studies. He plans to major in biomedical engineering in college and to become an orthopedic doctor.

By being recognized as Students of the Year, Tay and Zach show a tremendous amount of dedication, excellent character, phenomenal leadership skills. Clearly, the best is yet to come for these young men.

Louisiana's Fourth Congressional District is home to some of the brightest and most hardworking students in the Nation, just like Zach and Antavion. I am so proud to represent them here in Congress.

Once again, congratulations, guys. The best is yet to come.

RECOGNIZING UNITED BIOLOGICS

(Mr. CORREA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. CORREA. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize United Biologics in Santa Ana, who stepped up during the pandemic to help our local healthcare workers.

After I called on local manufacturers in my district to retool and manufacture PPE, United Biologics' President, John Barnhill, stepped up to the plate. The company designed a face shield, ordered supplies, and even added more employees to their workforce to produce thousands of face shields. Not only did this effort keep the company running and in business, but John Barnhill decided to donate the PPE to the local healthcare workers.

United Biologics shows what happens when we call on American companies to do the right thing.

TRIBUTE TO OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT DR. ED RAY

(Mr. SCHRADER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHRADER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Oregon State University president, Dr. Ed Ray, who officially retires today after 17 years of dedicated service to the school, the faculty, and, most importantly, the students.

During his tenure at Oregon State University, President Ray set a course for the school that made huge impacts in teaching, research, outreach, and engagement.

Under Ray's leadership, Oregon State University has undergone an incredible transformation, which has seen: student enrollment increase from 19,000 in 2004 to over 32,000 this year; completion of 96 major facility renovations and new buildings at OSU campuses, in excess of $1.1 billion; and a capital fundraising campaign that successfully raised nearly $1.15 billion.

President Ray leaves Oregon State with a legacy and vision for the future that will continue in service to student success, faculty and research excellence, outreach, and a 21st century mission.

Madam Speaker, on behalf of a grateful Beaver Nation, we say thank you to Ed.

Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Oregon State University President Dr. Ed Ray, who is officially stepping down today after 17 years of dedicated service to the school, faculty, and most importantly the students.

President Ray is a passionate advocate for higher education—it is his life's work in which he has dedicated the last 50 years as a teacher and administrator.

Prior to his arrival at Oregon State University in 2003, Ray spent over 30 years at Ohio State University where he was a member of the economics faculty from 1970 to 2003, served as economics department chair from 1976 to 1992, served as associate provost then senior vice provost and chief information officer from 1992 to 1998, and finally executive vice president and provost from 1998 to 2003.

Upon his arrival at OSU, President Ray set a course for the school to make substantial impacts in teaching, research, and outreach and engagement. Focusing on inclusive excellence through student access, learning, and success, as well as leading a campus community that is safe, inclusive, and diverse.

Under President Ray's leadership, OSU has become an internationally recognized public research university, undergoing an incredible transformation which has seen:

Student enrollment increase from 19,000 in 2004 to 32,744 students this year—making OSU the state's largest university for the sixth straight year. Of that number, 5,978 were first-generation students, 8,327 were students of color and 3,492 were international students.

The percentage of historically under-represented students at OSU has nearly doubled from 13.5 percent to 26.3 percent.
